Enterprise Content Management

Running an organisation isn't easy, but managing your content can be Introducing TechnologyOne's Enterprise Content Management, a SaaS solution to give you complete control over your entire document management process and power your success for the future.

Organisations today face many challenges: remote workforces, multiple offices, a constantly growing volume of documentation and content, and tighter regulatory controls.

Add to that the decentralised ownership of information – where once a team of people acted as the “guardians” of a company's records, today almost every employee is both creator and manager of information. This makes managing the vast amount of company documentation even more challenging.

To address these challenges, modern organisations incorporate robust information and records management capabilities within their enterprise solutions.

Embedding information management within your ERP ensures immediate access to relevant data during workflows, enhancing productivity and decision-making. Employees can quickly retrieve accurate, up-to-date information, enabling faster responses to challenges and opportunities across their core solutions.

"We've slashed customer wait times, reduced our error rate and improved our customer experience out of sight."
